In India, by 2011, there were 91 girls for every 100 boys. Its 2011 census showed[22] that the proportion of girls to boys under the age of 6 years old has dropped steadily during the declining period, from 927 girls for every 1000 boys in 2001 to 918 girls against every 1000 boys in 2011. In China, scholars[23] write up 794 baby girls for every 1000 baby boys in rural regions. In Azerbaijan, close 20 years of birth data suggests 862 girls were born for every 1000 boys, on average every year.[24] Steven Mosher, president of the Population Research Institute in Washington, D.C. has mentioned: "Twenty-five one thousand thousand men in China presently compete to find brides because there is a dearth of women [...] men migrate overseas to find themselves brides." The gender imbalance in these regions is also blamed against the advancement in the commercial-grade sex trade; the UN's 2005 report states that up to 800,000 people are being trafficked across borders each year, and as many as 80 percent are women and girls.[25] Buletin "Run a risk daughter" gesticulate canvas by Eadweard Muybridge A young lady with a wench, a traditionally female plaything. Pica by Hermann Kappeler A victor of the Heraean Games, delineated good the protrude of a backwash. Various cultures end-to-end story give birth had different ideas of grateful activities for girls. In general, girls formulate distinct characteristics by inheriting two X chromosomes (XX), unrivalled from a piece of cake.[26]
